Irish Food Supplies.

We are by no means disposed, in the present state of Irish affairs, to lend a ready support to any grievances put forward on behalf of this country. A country which is enjoying unusual prosperity in the middle of the greatest war in history, and is suffering, to its shame, least from the burdens of that war, has few grievances which it can put forward with any decent title to respect. We think, however, that the case which Mr. R. A. Anderson makes in a letter elsewhere in connection with Irish butter supplies does fall into the rare category of Irish grievances which require attention. It is not, moreover, a purely Irish grievance. Any damage which is suffered by the staple industry of Ireland must react upon Great Britain, which now depends on Ireland for a very large part of its food supplies. To the matter on which he writes to us to-day Mr. Anderson brings the authority which belongs to the true prophet. Nearly a year ago we printed a letter from him in which he pointed out that the dealings of the Food Controller with the Irish butter industry promised the most serious consequences, which would not affect that industry alone. He showed that it is not normally a particularly profitable industry; that it is carried on because it fits in better than milk-selling or cheese-making with the agricultural economy of mixed farming in Ireland; and that it is only made possible by the unpaid labour of the farmer's family. He proceeded to point out that any unreasonable interference with the normal working of the industry must mean not only the stoppage of winter dairying, which, after great efforts, was just becoming established, but also, in the conditions which prevailed last year, a very serious shortage of milk throughout the country.

On that occasion the advice which Mr. Anderson offered to the Food Controller on behalf of the Irish Agricultural Organisation Society was disregarded, and his warning was fulfilled. There was a very serious shortage of butter in Ireland last winter, as well as a serious shortage of milk, and the Food Controller eventually had to intervene with hasty and, therefore, unsatisfactory plans to relieve the position. Mr. Anderson, in forwarding a resolution passed by a meeting of representatives of the Irish co-operative creameries, held under the auspices of the I.A.O.S., now tells us that he believes that the position in Ireland with regard to butter supplies during the coming winter will be exceedingly serious unless some steps are taken at once. He goes so far as to say that, in view of the restrictions on the output of margarine, [illegible] every probab[illegible] not be able [illegible] for prop[illegible] conditions of [illegible] the positi[illegible] matter." The meeting of co-operative creameries proposed, and its recommendation is endorsed by the I.A.O.S., that, in order to meet the danger of a shortage of butter for home consumption in Ireland during the coming winter, the Food Control Committee should make arrangements for the cold storing of butter in public stores and at creameries. For this purpose it is urged that a reasonable price for butter sold in the winter months should be guaranteed, and that assurance should be given that the creameries will be allowed to sell their butter without Governmental interference. We do not profess to speak with any authority in this matter. We shall content ourselves with remarking that, since serious consequences followed the disregard of expert advice upon it last year, similar disregard this year may reasonably be expected to produce the same consequences again.

We are not sure that Mr. Anderson is on such strong ground in endorsing the resolution of the meeting which refers to the competition of condensed milk and milk powder. This resolution declares that the present conditions of making these commodities enable the makers to exercise undue competition for whole and separated milk, and that this competition will have a very serious effect on the supplies of whole milk, cheese, and butter available for Irish consumption, and will also be detrimental to the cattle and pig-rearing industries which are largely bound up with the existing dairying industry. It urges accordingly that a strict control should be exercised over the manufacture of these commodities. The whole question here clearly turns upon the definition of "undue competition." As the home production of butter has to face the competition of margarine, so the home production of whole milk has to face the competition of the condensed and powdered article. How was it proposed to determine the point at which legitimate competition of this kind becomes "undue competition"? The questions which Mr. Anderson raises in his letter bring us back to the central fact which we have urged repeatedly as governing the future of the agricultural industry in all its branches under the new conditions produced by the war. The report of the Selborne Committee to which we directed attention a fortnight ago is only the latest of a whole series of proofs that more and more the State will exact from farmers a high standard of efficiency; that it will protect their interests only in so far as they attain to that standard; and that it will set the standard itself and interfere in their industry in all directions unless they are prepared to conduct it efficiently themselves. The blunders of commission and omission which the State has made during the war are so many arguments urging farmers to organise themselves in order both to conduct their industry efficiently themselves and to be in a position to deal with the State on equal terms.

Public Waste.

Two interesting reports were issued from Government offices last night. One was a statement by the Treasury which showed the total revenue of the United Kingdom for the quarter ended yesterday. The other was a report by the Select Committee on National Expenditure which indicated the manner in which money is wasted by Government departments. As to the Treasury statement, it appears that the receipts amounted to £155,753,320, as compared with £115,959,286 in the corresponding quarter of 1917, an increase of £39,794,034. Excess profits duty and income tax accounted for the greater part of the increase. The amount derived from the former came to £62,955,000, an increase of £21,869,000. Income tax yielded £3,283,000 more than it did during the same period last year. The report on expenditure makes the serious revelation that the national shipyards are virtually a "white elephant." We gather from the report that the scheme was ill-conceived, and that it was embarked upon without even an approximate estimate of the amount required to make it a success being prepared. Up to the present a sum of over £4,000,000 has been spent on it. A period of ten months has elapsed since the inception of the scheme, but only a few of the thirty-four berths contemplated have been laid down. The promoters justified the scheme on the ground that they would be able to employ military labour and prisoners of war—labour which for obvious reasons could not be utilised in private yards—in the construction of ships. In a few weeks' time, however, they decided upon a change of policy. The idea of employing soldiers and prisoners was abandoned in favour of employing civilian labour; but no civilian labour was available. If it had been further expenditure would have been involved, for it would have been necessary to erect the necessary housing accommodation for the workers. A further change of policy thus became necessary, and it was resolved not to proceed with shipbuilding at the national yards for the present, but to develop the construction of fabricated ships at private yards until their capacity has been used to the fullest extent. In these circumstances the Committee on Expenditure is forced to the conclusion that "it is doubtful whether the yards will assist to any extent in making good during the war the losses sustained by our mercantile marine." What are the post-war prospects of the yards? It would be futile to hope that they could compete with private shipbuilders. Thus the nation is saddled with shipyards which are not of the slightest use at a time when ships are most urgently required, and money has been spent from which no return can be expected. The Committee comment on the expensive nature of the furniture which is provided for the various temporary departments of the Government. In many cases pedestal tables which cost £13 each have been supplied. By no stretch of the imagination could these be regarded as essential. The report as a whole creates a most unpleasant impression of useless expenditure. We admit that, in the case of huge improvisations, where quickness of production is the chief end in view, a certain amount of extravagance is inevitable; but, surely, after nearly four years, it is reasonable to expect that common-sense and business methods will be observed in the conduct of Government institutions.

Women's War Work.

The King paid a graceful tribute to the war work of women on Saturday when he and the Queen received an address of loyalty, to mark the celebration of their silver wedding, which falls on the 6th inst., from representatives of various women's organisations. He acknowledged that, if it had not been for the self-sacrificing efforts [illegible] it would have been impossible [illegible] lly to mobilise [illegible] the history of [illegible] war is written [illegible] able th[illegible] His Majesty indicated that further efforts on the part of women will be necessary before the struggle is brought to a victorious conclusion. At the present time there is serious danger that the crops in England will be injured, and that the yield from the harvest will not fulfil expectations owing to the lack of labour on the land. The land army requires all the recruits it can get. The King appealed to women to join it, and we are confident that his appeal will not fall on deaf ears. The Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, of which the Queen is Commander-in-Chief, also offers an avenue through which women can assist the Empire in its hour of need. We are confident that there are many women in Ireland who, if they cannot find work of national importance at home, will willingly cross the Channel to augment the ranks of the organisations which His Majesty specially mentioned.

RECRUITING IN IRELAND.

APPEAL FROM NEW ZEALAND'S IRISH PREMIER.

The Irish Recruiting Council, 23 St. Stephen's Green, has received the following message from Right Hon. W. F. Massey, Prime Minister of New Zealand. Mr. Massey, who has been a member of the New Zealand House of Representatives since 1896, was born in Ireland in 1856, and has visited this country since the beginning of the war. He is at present in London attending the Imperial Conference:—

"It will be readily admitted that during the present war many Irishmen have done all that it was possible for men to do as loyal citizens of the British Empire. They have distinguished themselves by their valour on the battlefield and in civil life by their enthusiasm for the glorious cause which the Allies are united in defending. But there are still many natives of Ireland who have not yet risen to a sense of their duties and responsibilities in the great struggle on which depends the future of civilisation. To these latter I would appeal, before the opportunity passes, to remember that Irishmen have always been on the side of liberty and freedom, the very cause for which in this awful struggle the best blood of the Allied nations has been poured out. Let them remember that Germany, by her record in this war, stands for the crushing of the small nations, for military despotism, oppression, and cruelty. These are the issues, and there is no middle course. He who refuses to assist the Allies, by doing so assists Germany.

"The nations responsible for all these outrages have staggered and horrified humanity during the last four years.

"This is not the time to keep up sectional differences or past grievances. This is a time for Irishmen especially to remember that the honour of their country and the safety of civilisation are at stake. Let them think of the Irish regiments who have suffered heavily in recent battles. Let them remember their gallant countrymen who have made the supreme sacrifice in this war, and then let them act as their instincts of loyalty and generosity dictate by joining the ranks of the Allies, and, while there is yet time, striking a blow for righteousness and justice.

"W. F. MASSEY,
"Prime Minister of New Zealand."

IMPERIAL WAR CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Imperial War Conference has been engaged almost exclusively during the fourth, fifth, and 6th meetings, held on June 24th, 26th, and 28th, in continuing discussions on various phases of post-war economic policy, begun last week. The first subject on which a resolution was passed dealt with the recent Non-ferrous Metal Industry Act of the United Kingdom, and the question of similar legislation for the oversea Dominions. This resolution was to the effect that, in pursuance of the policy of freeing the Empire from dependence on German-controlled organisations in respect of non-ferrous metals and ores, the Conference should endorse the principle of the Non-ferrous Metal Industry Act for the United Kingdom, and recommends the Governments of the Empire to adopt effective measures in so far as these may be necessary, and not already taken, to carry out this policy.

The next resolution related to the measures necessary to secure for the British Empire and the belligerent Allies the command of certain essential raw materials to enable them to repair the effects of the war as soon as possible, and safeguard their industrial requirements. The Conference agreed that this course was necessary, and expressed the opinion that the Governments of the British Empire should make such arrangements among themselves as will ensure that the essential raw materials produced within the Empire shall be available for the purposes named above, and that they should arrange with the Allied countries to utilise for the same purposes the essential raw materials produced in those countries. The Conference also recommended that the Committee of Members of the Conference should first consider the possible methods of each part of the Empire in obtaining command of the essential raw materials referred to, and that the Governments represented at the Conference should, in the light of information collected by their representatives on this Committee, consult with the representatives, producers, and trades concerned as to the method of obtaining the command best suited to each individual commodity.

SIR GEORGE CAVE AND EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS.

In an interview with the British News, writes Reuter's Amsterdam Correspondent, Sir George Cave said that the Prisoners of War Conference at The Hague would probably be resumed on Monday. He added—I do not anticipate much difficulty in coming to an arrangement as to the treatment of prisoners of war, but the question of exchange has naturally been more difficult owing to the nature of the problem. I still entertain hopes that we shall come to reasonable terms. He added that it was expected that the Conference would be concluded within a few days.

NEW PEER.

The dignity of a Peerage of the United Kingdom has been conferred on Colonel Sir Arthur Hamilton Lee, K.C.B., M.P., in recognition of his conspicuous public services as Director-General of Food Production.

LORD RHONDDA SERIOUSLY ILL.

Lord Rhondda's condition on Saturday was not so satisfactory. After a week's freedom from pulmonary and pleural complications, during which strength was gained, there has been a return of those troubles, with some loss of heart strength. His condition again gives rise to considerable anxiety.

THE CHIEF SECRETARY.

The Chief Secretary was engaged in the discharge [illegible] official duties at Dublin Castle on Saturday.

COMPULSORY SAVING OF FLAXSEED.

As may be observed from our advertising columns, an Order has been issued making it compulsory on flaxgrowers in Ireland to save portion of their 1918 flax crop for seed purposes. Farmers who have sown less than half a statute acre, or who have not sown seed of a fibre variety, are not required to save seed. All flaxgrowers, without exception, must furnish a declaration before they can have their flax scutched or sold. Mill-owners and others are prohibited from accepting any flax whatsoever unless it is accompanied by a declaration. Flaxgrowers should write to the Department of Agriculture, Dublin, for a copy of Special Flax Leaflet No. 14 (Revised), which contains full particulars.

DOGS FOR MILITARY PURPOSES.

It is announced by the War Office that a further gift of dogs for military purposes is required. The breeds include Danes, mastiffs, St. Bernards, Newfoundlands, bull-mastiffs, retrievers, collies, sheep-dogs, large curs, Dalmatians, lurchers, Airedales, cross-bred shepherds. No dogs smaller than Airedale terriers are required. Ages should be between 18 months and 5 years. No bitches are required. Dogs should be offered to the Commandant, War Dog School, Shoeburyness. If accepted and approved of, instructions will be sent for forwarding, and any dogs found unsuitable after testing will be returned to their owners, carriage paid.

BELFAST RED CROSS FETE.

The re-opening ceremony in connection with the successful fête, under the auspices of the British Red Cross and Order of St. John, in Botanic Gardens Park, Belfast, was performed on Saturday by Viscountess Bangor, in the regretted absence through sudden illness from influenza of Lady Edward Grosvenor. The Right Hon. Robt. Thompson, M.P., D.L., presided, and there was a large attendance. A vote of thanks was passed to Viscountess Bangor, on the motion of the Lord Mayor, seconded by Sir John Byers. A vote of thanks was also passed to the Chairman. The Lord Mayor announced, amid applause, that the proceeds of the first three days had exceeded £3,000.

In accordance with a new Order, lard will be rationed after July 14.

The King has approved of the appointment of the Rev. Prebendary William S. Swayne to be Dean of Manchester.

Four German officers, all military lieutenants, escaped from Skipton prisoners of war camp on Saturday.

LONDON CORRESPONDENCE.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
SUNDAY NIGHT.

Lord Wimborne has given notice of his intention to call attention in the House of Lords to the recent speech of Herr von Kühlmann in the Reichstag on June 24th last, and to move a resolution. Lord Wimborne is a first cousin of the Minister of Munitions.

Colonel Sir John Hope is to ask the Minister of National Service on Tuesday if he will state what arrangements he has already made for applying the Military Service (No. 2) Act, 1918, to Ireland in the event of the equitable ratio of recruits from Ireland not being obtained under the voluntary scheme; and if, considering the arrangements which he has already made, he can estimate the period which must still elapse between any final decision of the Government to apply the Military Service Act to Ireland and the actual posting to units of the first Irish recruits under a compulsory system.

The Illustrated Sunday Herald has an article by Colonel Lynch to-day in which the writer makes a stirring appeal to his countrymen. He says that on the day following the declaration of war he offered his services, as he had lately done again, and he believes had they been accepted then in the spirit in which they were offered and in the electrical conditions of enthusiasm and hope that then prevailed, it would have made a difference of a quarter of a million men. Colonel Lynch concludes by saying that the great German intellectual champions, especially their famous historians, have put forth to the world the teaching that the Celt is an inferior race, fit only for rhetoric and rebellion, and destined to be driven to the fringes of civilisation by the powerful, solid, and conquering Teuton. This war will determine whether the Teuton has spoken truly. If he has it will be at the expense of Ireland. The Teuton will put an end once and for all to Irish history, and, if Irishmen have helped him to achieve that result, who will say that the verdict was harsh? The Allied cause is Ireland's hope.

It will be interesting to see whether Mr. Bonar Law will to-morrow confirm the Daily Mail's statement that the German banks in London are to be immediately and finally closed. Hitherto he has steadily maintained that they must be kept going until the claims of the British creditors have been settled—a process which, he indicated recently, could not be fully complete until the end of the war. In the absence of explanatory details his answers have seemed to many members profoundly unsatisfactory, and there will be great satisfaction if he should now find himself able to do what he has hitherto declared to be impossible, and put these engines of "peaceful penetration" definitely out of gear.

It may be that Mr. Bonar Law will also state during the week what steps the Government are taking to deal with the enemy aliens in this country. Careful inquiries into all enemy aliens and their actions are steadily going on, and when Sir George Cave takes up the reins of office again he will find a mass of material ready for dissection. It is understood that all naturalised aliens of enemy birth will be included in a census to be taken, and this will be followed by a complete census of all aliens in the country holding any kind of position.

Many thousands of exemptions will expire during the coming week in London, and consequently many thousands of men will leave civilian life for Army training. Men who have been able to secure protection since the first Military Service Act came into force will now have to serve, and there is little doubt that many of them ought to have been in the Army long ago. It seems that exemptions will be very sparingly granted in future, and since when granted a postponement the applicant has to join the Volunteers, he has to begin a course of training. Training in the Volunteers is no light preparation for more serious work.

The debate on the administration of the new Military Service Act provided some surprises not only for members, but for Sir Auckland Geddes. He stated that he did not know that men who were examined were called upon to sign a book stating that they were satisfied with their medical examination, or that men were being served with calling-up notices before they left the medical inspection room. Both these practices have been in operation for some time. The signing of the book is often ordered before the man has been able to resume his clothes, and without his being given an idea of what he is signing or knowing in what grade he has been placed.

THE INFLUENZA EPIDEMIC.

HIGH DEATH-RATE IN BELFAST.

The influenza epidemic in Dublin is continuing to spread with alarming rapidity, and many schools are being closed in accordance with the suggestion of Sir Charles Cameron, Medical Officer of Health. During the past week two deaths from influenza were recorded in the Dublin area. Among the latest victims are members of the B Division of the Dublin Metropolitan Police, of whom no less than twenty-eight were on the sick list last night at the College Station. Of these, sixteen unmarried constables are confined to bed in the station, others have been removed to hospital, and the married men to their homes. So sudden and severe is the illness that two of the men collapsed immediately on returning from duty to the station. Up to the present only a few cases have been reported in the other city police stations, but a large number of cases have occurred in the Royal Irish Constabulary Depôt, Phoenix Park.

The influenza epidemic in Belfast shows signs of abating, although there are still a considerable number of cases. During the past week it is estimated that about thirty deaths, due largely to influenza, took place in Belfast. According to official returns the total number of deaths in the city from all causes was 191, of these 40 were from pneumonia. The deaths from pneumonia are four times above the normal, and are largely due to the influenza.

Five or six deaths were reported up to Saturday evening in Lurgan as a result of the influenza epidemic in the town. The local Union Infirmary is overcrowded with persons of both sexes suffering from the malady—in fact, the place has not been so full for over 30 years. The staffs of the factories in the town have been greatly depleted of their workers within the past week, and hundreds of workers in town are lying ill in their own homes.

The influenza epidemic at Sunderland is spreading, and numbers of school children and teachers are affected. The schools will be closed. Monmouthshire is also severely affected by influenza, and all schools may have to be closed this week.

OBITUARY.

LIEUTENANT-GENERAL WARD.

The death took place on the 27th June at his residence, Staplecross, Christchurch, Hants, of Lieutenant-General Hon. Bernard Matthew Ward, C.B., the only surviving son of the third Viscount Bangor, and uncle of the present peer, in his 87th year. General Bernard Ward entered the 47th Regiment in 1850, and fought in the Crimean War, receiving medal and clasp for Inkerman and Sebastopol. He subsequently became Lieutenant-Colonel of the 32nd Regiment, and was General Officer Commanding the depôt at Armagh from 1869-1881, when he retired, and was appointed in 1904 Honorary Colonel of the Suffolk Regiment, and in the following year he was created a Companion of the Order of the Bath. He married first Emily, daughter of Mr. J. La Touche, of Harristown, Co. Kildare, who died in 1868, and, secondly, in 1873, Laura, daughter of General Evan Maberly, C.B., who survives him.

PROFESSOR A. SENIER.

Admitted to Galway County Hospital on Monday last, suffering from an acute attack of pneumonia, Professor Alfred Senier, M.D., Ph.D., Professor in Chemistry, and Lecturer in Medical Jurisprudence and Hygiene at Galway University College, died on Saturday morning. Born at Burnley in [illegible], Dr. Senier was educated at Wisconsin, and took his M.D. at the University of Michigan, taking his Ph.D. at Berlin. He joined the professorial staff of the old Queen's College at Galway in 1891, coming from Cork, and he has since held his chair with distinction, publishing many valuable works on Organic Chemistry. He was President of the Chemical Section of the British Association in [illegible] and was a Fellow of the Institute of Chemistry. He was a great lover of travel and sport, and encouraged Rugby and other games amongst the students. He also showed his interest in the College Orchestral Society. He was a member of the Governing Body and of the Senate.

THE FEDERAL PLAN.

IRELAND'S POSITION.

PRIME MINISTER'S VIEWS.

ATTITUDE OF GREAT BRITAIN.

The Press Bureau on Saturday evening issued a report of a joint deputation from the Houses of Parliament to the Prime Minister on Federal Devolution.

A large and representative deputation of members of both Houses of Parliament was received by the Prime Minister at 10 Downing street to urge the case for Federal Devolution. The Prime Minister was accompanied by the Right Hon. G. N. Barnes, M.P.; General Smuts, the Right Hon. Austin Chamberlain, M.P.; the Right Hon. Walter Long, M.P.; the Right Hon. C. Addison, M.P.; the Right Hon. H. A. L. Fisher, M.P., and the Right Hon. E. Shortt, M.P.

LORD BRASSEY.

Lord Brassey, who introduced the deputation, said:—This deputation is composed of representatives from all parties, Liberal, Unionist, and Labour, for England, Scotland, and Wales, and from both Houses of Parliament. Our purpose is to impress upon the Government the urgent necessity of a general measure of Federal Devolution, and to assure them that there is a large body of opinion, not only in Parliament but throughout the country, in its favour. The deputation includes no representatives from Ireland, and there is no intention on our part to make any suggestion as to the policy which the Government should pursue as regards Ireland. The opinion held, however, on this point by various sections and individuals in this deputation will probably differ, but we are all agreed that, without prejudice to any proposals which the Government may have to make with regard to Ireland, the time has come for creating subordinate legislatures in England, Scotland, and Wales, as well as in Ireland. We believe that the strain on the machinery of the Government caused by the attempt to deal in one Parliament and one Cabinet with matters of general Imperial concern, with matters of common interest to the whole of the United Kingdom, and the separate interests of each part of the United Kingdom—that strain, which is great now, will be far greater at the conclusion of the war, when the problems of reconstruction will be pressing for attention. The vast extension of the sphere of Government action in recent years, and the creating of numerous new departments are additional reasons in support of the policy we advocate. There is only one other point to which I desire to refer. The Home Rule question cannot stand where it is. We must set ourselves right with public opinion in the Dominions and the United States on this matter. It may be impossible to set up an Irish Parliament under present conditions. It is clearly impossible to concede the demand for Dominion Home Rule without impairing the security and integrity of the United Kingdom. This makes it all the more necessary to show that the British attitude towards Home Rule is not a non-possumus one, but that we are prepared to deal with the question on lines which are understood as right and just in the Dominions and the United States, and which I venture to believe will in due time be accepted by Irishmen as a reasonable satisfaction of their demand.

EARL OF SELBORNE.

The Earl of Selborne—Unionists have never believed that what is called the Irish question was capable of solution in isolation, and I would remind you that you heard the late Mr. Chamberlain in the House of Commons in the year 1886 point out that if Mr. Gladstone's Government had prepared a scheme of general devolution his attitude would have been very different to the one which he took up. There is on the Statute Book the Government of Ireland Act, an Act which Unionists have rightly or wrongly, never believed to be a workable Act, and the bringing of which into operation without amendment we should regard with nothing less than dismay; but we approach this question now from the point of view of the welfare of the people of the whole United Kingdom, and of the interests of the Empire as a whole. Lord Selborne added [illegible] Parliament, as now constituted, attempted [illegible] grapple with the stupendous after-war problems only national disaster could result. He and those with him suggested that the Government should on its own responsibility propose a scheme of Devolution.

Mr. Adamson, Chairman of the Parliamentary Labour Party—The only observation which [illegible] make as a party is that in attempting to set up this federal form of government we are [illegible] make that the excuse for hanging up the settlement of Home Rule for Ireland. In putting forward your Home Rule measure for Ireland I do not think it is impossible to make it fit into the federal system, but we cannot afford to wait very much longer before we settle the Irish difficulty. I believe, unless we do it quickly, that we are laying ourselves open to two serious dangers: either we will be brought face to face with national disaster in the form of a rising in Ireland, or if we escape that the very near future will bring other forces into the settlement than the two sections of the British people themselves. I think that would be tragic. I think it is possible for the two sections of the British people to settle this long-delayed question, and we do not think that in attempting to set up a federal form of government we should make that the excuse for delaying making a serious attempt to settle the Irish question.

Mr. J. M. Robertson, Mr. Lawrence [illegible], Mr. Murray Macdonald, and Sir [illegible] Roberts also spoke.

PRIME MINISTER'S REPLY.

The Prime Minister, in reply, said—My lords and gentlemen, I feel rather a difficulty in answering the case put forward by the deputation, for the simple reason that I cannot claim to be impartial. I have always been a strong federalist, and I recollect very distinctly the speech delivered by Mr. Chamberlain in 1886, which was the first speech he delivered after the introduction of the Home Rule Bill. In that speech he said that in his judgment the only rational solution, if I recollect his phrase, was on federal lines. I do not pretend that I knew as much about politics then as I do now, but at any rate I felt that there was a good deal of hope in that phrase, and I wish it had been possible then, or during the intervening period which now covers a generation, to have arrived at a solution of the problem on those lines which I think would have been satisfactory to Ireland, which would have relieved the congestion of the Imperial Parliament, and which would have enabled the Imperial Parliament to attend to duties which have been demonstrated by this war to have been of overwhelming importance. I took the trouble some time to examine the character of the work done by the Imperial Parliament during the last [illegible] years. I cannot say that I have done that since the war. It was some time before the war, but I was very much struck with the fact that, looking at the index to Hansard, you found that about three-quarters of the attention of Parliament was occupied with matters that affected only one part of the United Kingdom, so during that period the members of the other parts of the United Kingdom had only an indirect interest in the problems that were under discussion. On the other hand, Lord Selborne has pointed out how casually very often the Imperial Parliament took its discussion on foreign affairs. Now we realise how important these discussions were, but we know perfectly well that discussion on foreign affairs was very often regarded as a kind of off day in the life of Parliament. People said, "What is coming on Thursday?" "Oh, well, foreign affairs." Then you made other arrangements as a rule. That is really the fact, and here we see that the very life of this country, the very life of civilisation, was dependent upon topics which were being discussed in that casual, off-hand, indifferent, apathetic manner. That is what will happen so long as you have a Parliament where you have all kinds of things crowded upon it, great and small, important and trivial, Imperial and local. Take what is happening to-day. I am told in the House of Commons you have got a Scottish debate. Almost by a sort of common consent it is left to the Scottish members, and rightly so, and anybody who is daring enough to intrude, well, he is soon put in his proper place by Scottish members of both parties. I recollect in the old days, when some of us were rather interested, that Parliamentary business should not progress too rapidly, when there was a Scottish bill before the House some of us were daring enough to express our views, not because we had any particular interest in Scottish business, but because we did not want the business of Parliament to get on too rapidly, men of all parties from Scotland turned round and said, who are these intruders to interfere with Scottish business? And yet when the division was on we were all expected to take part in it without the slightest knowledge of the topic, without the slightest knowledge of even the elements of the fundamentals of the topic, and it was not regarded as even an intrusion. That is really a most unintelligent way of doing business.

NEW PROBLEM FOR PARLIAMENT.

I sympathise thoroughly with what has been said by all the speakers here about what will happen if this is the kind of machine which has to deal with the problem of reconstruction. Lord Selborne said the old order had passed away, or, at least, was passing away. It is now passing away in the terrors and horrors of war, and there is no doubt whatever, I will not say a new set of problems which will confront us, but it will be a new attitude of mind with which we shall deal with these problems, and the urgency of our problems [illegible] has been written in letters of flame upon walls. You will be called upon to deal [illegible] course of a session or two with the [illegible] questions which are of the most overwhelming urgency, and which will require very careful examination in detail, because they affect the life, industry, commerce, and trade of the people at every turn. Parliament, the present machine, has got to deal with that, and at the same time deal with local affairs in Scotland, Wales, and in Ireland, as well as in England, with its gigantic problems. I do not think there could be any doubt in the mind of any man who has given thought to the present that this ought to be dealt with, and dealt with as soon as possible. Now let us [illegible] to the difficulties. You cannot carry anything through during the war without something like general assent. I do not mean to say that you have to convert everybody in Parliament [illegible] is impossible. I do not mean to say [illegible] even if there is a fairly substantial body of opinion which is opposed that you ought to regard that as final, but I think there ought to be not merely the ordinary kind of majority of 70 or 100.

NEED OF UNITY.

[illegible] to feel, at any rate, it is a [illegible] three to one in the House of Commons in favour of effecting a change of this kind. I have no doubt about the state of opinion in Scotland. I have known that for some time. I think in Wales there is a fairly unanimous opinion, and Unionists are just as favourably disposed to the proposal. I think, as Liberals and Liberals are as strongly in favour of it [illegible] Unionists. I am not so clear about the [illegible] of opinion in England. That is really the matter. After all, here is a population of 34,000,000 out of 45,000,000, and unless you have got a substantial majority of the English representatives in favour of it, it is [illegible] attempt it. You cannot attempt a big new [illegible] which is highly controversial in the middle of a great war, because national unity is one of the weapons of victory. So we must, therefore, have unity. Upon that subject I [illegible] not altogether been quite [illegible] may suggest to those who are in favour [illegible] that is what they have got [illegible] selves to. It is really a [illegible] English constituencies, and then they have got to make up their minds about it. [illegible] allow me to say so, I am very struck with the representative and influential character of the deputation. It is representative not merely [illegible] the fact that it represents the three parties of the United Kingdom—all except Ireland—[illegible] also that it represents the various shades of opinion. You have got to carry the [illegible] majority of your associates with you [illegible] colleagues and I will consider very carefully what you have said, but we will [illegible] before anything is attempted [illegible] it will not create Parliamentary [illegible] which no Government could [illegible] the middle of a war, because [illegible] time, our thoughts, and our energies are absorbed by the overwhelming [illegible] ing the war.

ATTITUDE OF ULSTER.

And here you can undoubtedly [illegible] are other special difficulties [illegible] is the question of Ulster. It is [illegible] upon what the view of the [illegible] what part Ulster would play [illegible] tion. I agree with what has [illegible] Selborne, that the Irish question [illegible] for this Government. Whether the [illegible] help to solve it I would not [illegible] Prophecy is never very safe in [illegible] politics, and it is certainly never [illegible] indulge in prophecy when you [illegible] about Ireland, because there have been [illegible] prophecies, and they have always [illegible] dispute. You [illegible] science on the subject. At the present [illegible] Unionists and Home Rulers have [illegible] feeling that [illegible] country, and [illegible] moment [illegible] sensible, fair and just solution [illegible] if it is a business-like one [illegible] gives equal treatment to Ireland [illegible] Scotland and Wales—you [illegible] Federal basis. Well, we [illegible] what we are taking ourselves [illegible] enough for me right to [illegible] you. You would then satisfy [illegible] who at the moment are not [illegible] old country has treated Ireland [illegible] are not convinced of it. [illegible] right in coming to that conclusion [illegible] is not the time to argue. [illegible] we have been treating it [illegible] and, on the whole, they are [illegible] have not extended to Ireland [illegible] freedom which is her due. [illegible] America there is no doubt [illegible] feeling in America. I have [illegible] within even the last few days [illegible] minent Americans, who are [illegible] English, who have a great [illegible] country, a great affection for this [illegible] a growing affection for this [illegible] are unhappy in their [illegible] the fact that the Irish [illegible] not solved. What you [illegible] able to propose a solution which [illegible] to say: "We have dealt justly [illegible] try." Therefore, I am glad [illegible] tinction of party, you are taking [illegible] hand, and are promoting [illegible] problem which will ultimately [illegible] faction without prejudice to [illegible] land—a solution which is [illegible] and a business one.

ARCHBISHOP OF YORK.

The Archbishop [illegible] his recent visit to the United [illegible] said—I think there is a [illegible] standing of the Irish problem [illegible] best minds of America through the [illegible] course, which, happily, this war has [illegible] us. But I have heard it [illegible] men whose words ought to count [illegible] tion of public opinion in America [illegible] make a great difference to [illegible] stand why Ireland has not been [illegible] what we would regard as State [illegible] we entirely understand that [illegible] nature of Dominion rights would [illegible] with the problems which the United [illegible] has to face." Therefore, it would [illegible] great matter if a solution could be [illegible] not only satisfied so large a measure of opinion at home, but also vindicated the [illegible] tion of this country in the eyes of [illegible] are increasingly our friends and partners.

The deputation withdrew.

KING AND WOMEN WORKERS.

The King, addressing about 3,000 workers in the quadrangle of [illegible] Palace on Saturday afternoon, paid tribute to the splendid services rendered [illegible] women to the cause of the Empire. The occasion was the presentation of an address of loyalty presented to Their Majesties on the celebration of their silver wedding.

The King said:—The Queen and I thank you for the address to which we have listened with such interest [illegible]. We are touched by the thoughts that [illegible] expression of loyalty and devotion on the occasion of our silver wedding should come from this representative body of women, who by their services have assisted the State in the full mobilisation of its man power. The Queen is proud to be associated with the workers in her position of Commandant-in-Chief of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, and it is a satisfaction to us both that our daughter is serving as a Commandant of a Voluntary Aid Detachment.

The range of war work undertaken by women is well exemplified in your imposing procession. I understand that every woman in your representative units is a whole-time worker engaged either in some work of National importance under a State Department, or in some service of public utility under local authorities. When the history of our country's share in this war is written no chapter will be more remarkable than that relating to this range and extent of women's participation. Women have readily worked for long hours and under trying conditions in our factories and elsewhere to produce the supplies of munitions which were urgently needed at the front, and to maintain the essential services of the country. Nurses and V.A.D. workers too have laboured in hospital and dressing stations for the care of the sick and wounded, with even more than the accustomed devotion which has characterised our Red Cross service since the days of the Crimean War. They have often faced cheerfully and courageously great risks both at home and overseas in carrying on their work, and the Women's Army has its own roll of honour of those who have lost their lives in the service of their country. Some even have fallen under the fire of the enemy. Of all these we think to-day with reverent pride. As the struggle in which we are engaged becomes more intense, the need of the assistance of all the women of the country grows greater. In many branches of service in Queen Mary's Army Auxiliary Corps and the Land Army, to mention only two, more women are wanted, and will be wanted. I trust the procession to-day will bring home to those who have not yet realised it the country's need of their help.

DUBLIN STOUT AND PORTER PRICES.

An intimation has been issued by Messrs. Guinness, Son, and Co. to the licensed traders in Dublin that on and after to-day the prices of their extra stout and porter will be respectively as follows:—Hogsheads, £8 1s. [illegible] and £6 9s. [illegible]; barrels, £5 0s. 9d. and £4 [illegible] 3d.; kilderkins, £2 10s. 9d. and £2 0s. 9d.; firkins, £1 5s. [illegible] and £1 0s. 9d. It is estimated that these figures represent an increase of £1 [illegible] 6d. per barrel for stout and 15s. 9d. per barrel for porter, or about one penny per pint retail, compared with the old prices. It is anticipated that porter will be raised in Dublin to 8d. per pint and stout to [illegible] per bottle and 10d. per pint.

LONG-RANGE FIGHT OFF BELGIAN COAST.

FROM "THE TIMES" OF TO-DAY.

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH THE PROPRIETORS OF THE TIMES.)

AN ILLUMINATING REPORT.

Commenting on the fourth of the reports of the Select Committee on National Expenditure, The Times expresses the hope that the series will be duly read, marked, and digested by the taxpayer. The taxpayer's real concern, no doubt, is more with the future than with the past, or even with the present. He understands quite well that the conditions of war make certain kinds of extravagance inevitable for the [illegible]—such kinds, for instance, as the hurried, and, therefore, expensive, construction of [illegible] two small temporary buildings which are [illegible]. But he is deeply interested in seeing that the gigantic growth of the Civil Service is not allowed to become permanent, and, therefore, he will note with approval such recommendations as that which would place the acquisition of land for all Government departments under the large organisation already existing for purposes of valuation. One of the fundamental [illegible] of the new bureaucracy has been its failure to work with established machinery. The War Office has been a conspicuous sinner in this particular matter of acquiring sites. A [illegible] course was followed by the Admiralty, and we are not ourselves disposed to impute much blame to the Government over the national shipyards, with which much of the new report is occupied. The scheme was hurried, imperfect, adopted without sufficient advice, but was born of a real anxiety for the most urgent of national problems—namely, the provision of shipping—and it will not be wasted. [illegible] comparatively minor vein in the report requires a word of caution. Sir Alfred Mond's agricultural operations in Richmond and Bushey Parks are properly stigmatised by the Committee, who tersely conclude that "it would seem advisable not to continue these experiments." The danger is lest a foolish piece of window-dressing should be turned into an argument against increased tillage under reasonable conditions. More home-grown food remains just as vital a necessity as more shipping.

"SUBSTANTIAL AGREEMENT."

In a letter to The Times, Lord MacDonnell, [illegible] to Mr. J. R. Fisher, points out that the "substantial agreements" to which he referred in the House of Lords were "chiefly those provisionally reached in the Sub-Committee of [illegible]" in the Irish Convention. I distinctly [illegible] in the House of Lords, adds Lord MacDonnell, that I agreed with the minority [illegible] Nationalists in claiming the control of Irish Customs and Excise for the Irish Parliament. Less than the Catholic Bishops, Mr. [illegible], and Mr. Devlin, I held that Ireland should [illegible] to control her own Customs and Excise administration, provided no injury resulted therefrom to any legitimate British or Ulster interest. I have indicated how the occurrence of any [illegible] may be obviated. I hold that without [illegible] upon the proceeds of Customs and Excise the government of Ireland cannot be [illegible], and it was because the validity of the arguments offered in support of that position was challenged, both by the Ulster Unionists and the Unionists from the South and West of [illegible], that I proposed the postponement of the issue till it could be examined at leisure after the war, and in the light of fuller [illegible]

E POPE'S PRAYER FOR PEACE.

On Saturday morning, says Reuter's Rome rrespondent, a prayer for peace and for the stablishment of justice, charity, and fra nity throughout the world, was offered by Pope in St. Peter's, to which he descended 10 o'clock on Friday night. The Pontiff accompanied only by Monsignor Ceretti, ing Secretary of State, and President of Brotherhood for Night Adoration of the ssed Sacrament, whose members to the num r of about a thousand were present in the church including Princes Colonna, Orsini, assimo, and Rospigliosi. At a quarter past midnight e Pope celebrated Mass, which, according to motu proprio, issued on May 9th, was in ded for the cessation of the evils tormenting manity. It was thus the first of the St. eter's Day Masses for this purpose, which re to be celebrated by the whole Roman atholic clergy throughout the world. Mgr. retti followed with a Thanksgiving Mass, hilst the well-known composer, Abbé Perosi, ayed the organ. The ceremony ended with e Apostolic Benediction from the Pope, who entered his apartment at 2 o'clock in the orning.

BRITISH OFFICIAL.

Saturday, 10.5 a.m.

The total number of prisoners taken by us in yesterday's successful operation east of Nieppe Forest (north of Bethune and south of Hazebrouck), exceeds four hundred. This figure does not include those taken west of Merris (east of Hazebrouck).

Two German field guns, in addition to a number of machine guns and trench mortars, were also captured by us.

Hostile artillery has been active opposite Vaire Wood, south of the Somme, and west of [illegible].

There was increased artillery activity on both sides in the Nieppe Forest sector.

Saturday, 7.48 p.m.

Beyond the usual artillery activity on both sides there is nothing to report.

Aviation.—There was much fighting in the air on the British front on the 28th inst., and enemy machines showed considerable activity. During the day we shot down 17 German aeroplanes and drove down six others out of control. Three of our machines are missing.

Our airmen and balloons employed in observation work took advantage of the fine weather to co-operate with the artillery in engaging hostile batteries and dumps with good destructive effect. A great number of explosions and fires were caused thereby. Photographic machines were also active, and many reconnaissances were carried out both by day and night. Twenty-two tons of bombs were dropped by us during the day on various targets, and [illegible] in the course of the following night.

Sunday, 10.11 a.m.

Early this morning the enemy attacked one of our posts in the neighbourhood of Merris, but was repulsed after sharp fighting. We captured a few prisoners during the night in patrol encounters on different parts of the front.

Hostile artillery developed considerable activity early this morning against our new positions east of Nieppe Forest. The enemy's artillery has been active also during the night in the [illegible] sector, north of the Scarpe, and near [illegible].

Sunday, 7.25 p.m.

We captured a few prisoners this morning as the result of a successful daylight raid east of [illegible]. There is nothing further of special interest to report.

Aviation.—Hostile activity in the air on the 29th [illegible] was not very great, but our fighting machines succeeded in destroying nine German aeroplanes, and in driving down eight others out of control. Five of our machines are missing.

Much important reconnaissance work was carried out by us, and a number of aerial photographs were taken. Aeroplane and balloon observation was afforded to our artillery throughout the day, as usual. Fifteen and a-half tons of bombs were dropped by our machines during the day, the most important targets being the railway [illegible] Lille, Courtrai, Comines, and Estaires. [illegible] night there was bombing on both sides. The enemy did practically no damage. [illegible] machine. We dropped 18 tons of bombs, of which eight tons were launched upon the railway connections at Tournai. All our [illegible] machines returned safely.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

Saturday.

The Germans twice attempted to drive us from the positions which we won yesterday south of the Aisne.

The attack, carried out by several battalions between [illegible]-Bas and the Ravin de Cutry, was repulsed, and our new front was maintained in its entirety.

South-west of Rheims lively fighting occurred. In the sector of the Montagne de Bligny the Italian troops drove back detachments of the enemy which had succeeded for a moment in gaining a footing in their advanced elements.

On our side we carried out during the night several raids north-west of Montdidier, and in particular American units took about forty prisoners, including an officer.

In the Forest of Apremont and in Lorraine we also brought back prisoners, and captured war material.

Saturday Night.

There is nothing to report except fairly great artillery activity between the Ourcq and the Marne, and in the region in the east of Rheims.

Sunday.

We carried out several raids, especially to the west of Hangard and to the south of Autreches, and brought back some prisoners. To the south of the Ourcq our troops, during a local operation yesterday evening shortly before ten, carried the crest situated between Nouloy and Passy en Valois, thus making an advance of 800 metres on a front of three kilometres. We captured 275 prisoners, including three officers. In the Vosges we repulsed two enemy raids.

Aviation.—On June 28th and 29th our chasing aeroplanes brought down 15 German machines, and set fire to two captive balloons. In addition 19 other enemy machines were put out of action.

Our bombing squadrons during the same period carried out day and night raids, during which 47 tons of bombs were successfully dropped on the aviation grounds on the Somme, the bivouacs in the Roziere-Braye region, in the Valley of the [illegible], and the railway stations of Soissons, Fere-en-Tardenois, etc.

Moreover, five tons of explosives were dropped on the 28th on the German troops who were preparing to counter-attack in the Cutry region. Lieutenant Fonck brought down three German aeroplanes on the 25th, and two others on the 27th. This brings to forty-nine the number of machines destroyed up to to-day by this pilot, and officially reported.

Sunday Night.

South of the Aisne we improved our positions in the region of St. Pierre-Aigle, and took a hundred prisoners.

AMERICAN OFFICIAL.

Saturday.

Raiding and patrolling have been marked at several points in Picardy. This morning a small detachment of our troops captured 2 prisoners, of whom one was an officer, and inflicted severe losses on the enemy. Our casualties were very small. In the Chateau Thierry region a hostile patrol was driven back and suffered severely. In a patrol encounter a raiding party, which attempted to reach our lines in the Vosges, was repulsed by rifle fire.

GERMAN OFFICIAL.

Saturday.

Army Group of Crown Prince Rupprecht—North of the Lys infantry attacks were launched by the British, after violent firing. Three assaults against Merris broke down with heavy losses. In the middle of the battlefield the enemy penetrated into [illegible] Berquin. A counter-attack by troops which were in readiness brought him to a standstill there, and threw him back beyond the western border of the village. North of Merville an enemy attack broke down under our fire. On the rest of the front the artillery activity, which was lively during the night, died down in the early hours of the morning. South-west of Bucquoy strong attacks by several reconnoitring detachments of the enemy were repulsed.

Army Group of the German Crown Prince.—South of the Aisne the French attacked after strong artillery preparation. They were repulsed near Ambleny after stubborn fighting. They gained ground beyond Cutry. Our counter-attacks threw them back to the heights on both sides of the place. The attempts of the enemy to carry the infantry attack further by bringing armoured cars into action broke down. At the Foret des Villers Cotterets we pursued the retreating enemy as far as his positions of departure, and captured prisoners.

The enemy suffered a heavy defeat in the air. Nineteen enemy aeroplanes were shot down.

Twenty Italian prisoners were captured in a minor operation south-west of Rheims.

[illegible]day.

In the fighting sectors north of the Lys and south of the Aisne increased artillery activity continued throughout the day. Between the Yser and the Marne there were small infantry engagements. During strong thrusts of the enemy south of the Ourcq, and as the result of a successful operation by our troops at the Hartmannsweilerkopf, we captured prisoners.

[illegible]day.

There is nothing new to report from the theatres of war.

PRESIDENT POINCARE AT THE DAWN.

Reuter's Paris Correspondent states that the presentation of colours to the Czecho-Slovak troops now in France took place yesterday morning, in the presence of President Poincaré, the members of the Czecho-Slovak Council, representatives of the Parliamentary Committees, and a number of high military authorities. In an eloquent speech, President Poincaré recalled the glorious past of Bohemia, fighting Germanic penetration. Concluding his speech, President Poincaré said:—"Not far from here the old French province which was torn from us is also awaiting victory, the reward of its fidelity. The sun which will rise upon a free Alsace-Lorraine will also shine upon all martyred nations. You will soon see the first signs of this dawn on the horizon."

NEW WAR WEAPON.

THE LIGHT TANKS.

The Press Association's Special Correspondent with the French Army in France, telegraphing on June 30th, says:—An important part was played in the battle of Friday between the Aisne and the Villers Cotterets Forest by new small tanks, which were, for the first time, engaged in considerable force. It was not the first time that the enemy has seen these engines. One or two of them were captured by the Germans in the fighting early in June, but their first appearance was experimental. On Friday they were assigned an important rôle in the fight, and were given ground to operate on over which the ordinary heavy tank could not move at all.

Yesterday I saw a company of these new tanks returning through the forest to their headquarters, all splashed and pitted by German bullets. One's first impression of them was that they are small compared with any tanks one has previously seen. They are about one-quarter the size and weight of the ordinary battle tank; they are driven by an ordinary petrol motor made by a famous French firm of automobile makers, and carry a personnel of two men, one of whom steers while the other fires the guns. The armament of the little tanks consists of machine guns and a gun.

Their great advantage lies in their mobility. They can easily outstrip a heavy tank, and can climb a slope, as they did on Friday, which a heavy tank could not attempt, and can be swung completely round in their tracks like a spinning ball in a few seconds. Their small size and high speed naturally makes them a more difficult target for the enemy's artillery than the heavy tank.

FRIDAY'S FIGHTING.

The fighting on Friday centred mainly around Hill 162, or Three Poplars, as it is sometimes called, and the Cutry Ravine. Hill 162 is the highest point of the region, and its possession enables us to overlook the enemy's positions in the rear, a privilege which before its capture they enjoyed in regard to us. Cutry Ravine is a small, deep valley branching off from the main valley immediately north of the Three Poplars height. Its value for the enemy lay in the fact that it contains a number of deep subterranean quarries, in which he was able to keep large garrisons of men in dangerous proximity to our lines and in safety from our guns. On each side of Cutry Ravine the ground rises some 300 feet above the bottom of the valley, and so sharply that the men climbing it had to help themselves with their hands. Farther to the left and right the slope is less sharp, and the tanks were able to crawl up it.

There was naturally no question of rushing head foremost into the wasps' nest in the ravine. The French infantry stormed the cliff-like ascent, each side of it passed round the head of the ravine, joined hands behind it, and continued to advance till they reached a line a mile from their starting line in the valley. Two companies, with flammenwerfer, were afterwards sent down into Cutry to clear out the village and quarries, which was effected without serious resistance. The majority of the 1,200 prisoners were taken in the ravine.

THE CHARGE OF THE TANKS.

The operation was effected without preparation, and the best proof of the furious speed with which the troops carried out their task is that all the objectives were occupied, in spite of the nature of the ground, within half-an-hour of the opening of the barrage, and before the enemy had time to organise resistance. The ground to the right of Three Poplars was actually taken by a charge of the light tanks, which crossed it amid a hail of machine gun bullets, the infantry following. Other tanks which accompanied the infantry who took the Cutry Ravine rolled along the edge of the ravine, firing into the Boches down below, and also as they crossed the plateau. Although exposed to very heavy artillery fire, the tanks continued to assist the infantry throughout the engagement, one remaining under fire for over four hours.

SWIFT ADVANCE OF FRENCH TROOPS.

Telegraphing later, the same Correspondent says:—

Twelve hundred prisoners taken in the attack of yesterday between the Aisne and Villers Cotterets Forest have already been counted, and the total is not yet complete. The full and instant success of the operations affords brilliant proof of the ability of our command not only to take the offensive when the moment is deemed favourable, but to take the enemy by surprise into the bargain. The battlefield of yesterday and the eastern slope of the Coeuvres Valley is a region of frequent villages and deep subterranean quarries, like those of the Malmaison Plateau. The Germans, caught suddenly by our artillery and machine gun preparation, bolted into the villages and quarries to await developments under cover, but when the French infantry attack began it came with such a speed that the enemy had not time to recover, and was obliged to surrender in hundreds in his shelters.

GERMANS CAUGHT IN A CHURCH.

The attack was executed by regiments supported by tanks. The first waves crossed the valley in a single bound, and occupied the heights looking down upon it from the east and south without a check. One hundred and seventy Germans, including a battalion adjutant, were caught in the village church of Cutry, and forced to surrender without firing a shot. The fighting was hottest in the woods east of Laversine, when two German companies held on until they were literally wiped out by a furious charge with the bayonet. Three times during the day the enemy tried to restore his position by counter-attacks, all of which were stopped dead by the French fire. The prisoners taken included men from several German regiments. Among them are 18 officers and 101 non-commissioned officers.

THE ULSTER DIVISION.

Under the auspices of the Grand Orange Lodge of Belfast, yesterday was set apart for the commemoration of the men of the Ulster Division who died in the great fight at Thiepval on July 1st, 1916. Three great united services were held in the Ulster Hall, the Assembly Hall, and the Y.M.C.A. Hall while other services were held in the Cathedral and in various churches in the city, the buildings in each case being crowded. The Bishop of Down and Connor and Dromore (Right Rev. Dr. D'Arcy) preaching in the Ulster Hall, said that among the things which should be held in everlasting memory was the glorious courage and fidelity of the men of the Ulster Division who fought on that memorable 1st of July. He supposed most of them there that day were engaged on work of special national value. He appealed to them to continue to throw the spirit of devotion into that work. Their Ulster Division needed to be filled up. He touched on a very difficult subject. He believed the wiser heads among them ought to be taking counsel—he was sure they were—in order to see what was the true way of helping them.

WAR ITEMS.

Enemy aeroplanes dropped bombs on Paris and vicinity on Friday night. No victims are reported.

According to a Karlsruhe telegram to the Frankfurter Zeitung, Ludwigshafen was attacked by Allied airmen on Wednesday night. The telegram states that no great damage was caused, but one man was killed.

Captain Marcel Doumer, commanding an aeroplane squadron, was killed on Friday in an air fight at Villers Cotterets. He is the third son of Senator Doumer, former President of the French Chamber of Deputies, to fall on the field of honour.

M. Clemenceau, says a Reuter message dated Paris, Friday, informed a representative of the Echo de Paris that, in addition to the sectors occupied by the African and Italian troops, he also visited two French Armies, and was very satisfied with the conditions at the front.

The Telegraaf (Amsterdam) states that a British biplane was forced to land near Breskens, close to Flushing, on Saturday evening, owing to engine trouble. The occupants of the machine, Lieutenant Locker and Gunner Burcois, are both unhurt, and will be interned. They had flown from an aerodrome in France, and had dropped bombs near Bruges.

An Amsterdam telegram, dated Friday, states that yesterday's Koelnische Volks Zeitung suggests that besides bad weather, treachery of some sort is also responsible for the Austrian failure on the Piave, and it cites the Vienna Reichspost for the assertion that the German gas method which the Austrians employed in the Sette Communi region against the enemy artillery was a failure.

AUSTRIAN LOSSES IN ITALY.

DR. WEKERLE'S NOTABLE ADMISSION.

HUNGARIANS' PART IN THE FIGHT.

ANOTHER ITALIAN SUCCESS.

In a statement in the Hungarian Parliament the Premier, Dr. Wekerle, admitted that in the recent offensive and retreat the Austro-Hungarians lost 100,000 men.

The Minister also said that Hungarians represented 47 per cent. of the troops taking part and Austrians 53 per cent.

The Italians have secured a notable victory on the Asiago Plateau at Monte Val Bella, which they wrested from the enemy.

ITALIAN OFFICIAL.

Saturday.

The artillery struggle, which remained moderate on the remainder of the front, was somewhat lively on the Asiago Plateau. Our patrols, with their usual activity, effectively harassed the enemy, and damaged his defences at several points. Railway centres and enemy troops in movement were bombarded in the lines of communication by our Allied airmen, who, during the day, brought down three enemy machines.

Sunday.

On the Asiago Plateau, where the heroic resistance which, on June 15th, crushed the impetus of the preponderant enemy forces, and where in daily acts of bravery the Italian troops became united in action and in glory with the British and French of the valiant 6th Army, fighting yesterday began anew at dawn. Our troops, sustained by intense artillery fire, and supported by demonstrative action with firing parties resolutely carried out by the Allies, attacked Monte Val Bella, and succeeded after a bitter struggle in wresting it from the enemy.

During the day and night large enemy masses launched to the counter-attack and slaughter, were repulsed by our infantry, and decimated by concentrations of artillery fire, and by the machine gun fire of aeroplanes. The position carried was victoriously held by us. Twenty-one enemy officers and 788 other ranks belonging to four divisions were made prisoners, and cannon, trench mortars, and numbers of machine guns were captured.

More to the east, between Frenzela Valley and the Brenta, one of our parties took by assault a well-fortified post on the southern slopes of the Sasso Rossa, capturing two officers and 31 men.

On the remainder of the front our artillery carried out effective harassing bombardments.

At Capo Sile patrol operations brought us some prisoners. In the Lazarina and Sugana Valleys enemy railway establishments were bombarded by our airmen.

AUSTRIAN OFFICIAL.

Saturday.

Near Zenson and Noventa di Piave enemy reconnoitring detachments attempted to cross the river. For the rest, there have been artillery duels of varying strength everywhere.

Sunday.

Our positions on the Plateau of the Seven Communes were subjected yesterday from 3 a.m. to the heaviest artillery fire, which was followed a few hours later by strong attacks against the Col de Rosso and the Monte de Val Bella. Whilst the assaults against the Col del Rosso remained completely unsuccessful, the Italians, after desperate hand-to-hand fighting, were able to penetrate into the first line on the Monte Val Bella. They were, nevertheless, ejected as a result of counter-attacks by battalions of Hungarian infantry. Further attempts to attack, as well as local thrusts against and near Asiago were extinguished in our artillery fire. Everywhere else there were artillery duels of varying intensity.

AUSTRIAN LOSSES: 100,000 MEN.

According to a telegram received on Saturday by Reuter from its Amsterdam office, the Hungarian Premier, Dr. Wekerle, made a remarkable speech in the Lower House of the Hungarian Parliament on Friday, in the course of which he said—In connection with the last offensive, especially our advance and retreat in the region of the Piave and the Brenta, such exaggerated and incredible tales are circulating that in order to give a correct idea of the actual position and to calm public opinion I desire to speak publicly and with complete frankness. First, I would state that we publish all war news with complete sincerity and without any attempts to gloss them over. As proof I will only point out that we always compare the losses established by ourselves with the reports and data published by our enemies. (Applause.) The House knows that we advanced on the Piave and the Brenta, and in order to spare human lives, when the retention of our positions would have involved enormous losses, we withdrew on the Piave, and only retained many occupied regions on the Brenta. In this retreat 12,000 prisoners altogether fell into the hands of the enemy.

The Deputy, M. Fiinski, interjected: "How high were the losses?"

The Premier continued—The Honved Minister recently spoke of 8,000 prisoners. On the ground of reports since published, I must correct this, and state that 12,000 men were captured by the Italians, whilst 50,000 Italian prisoners fell into our hands. In the case of our offensive and retreat this figure cannot be termed excessively high. Much sadder is the loss we suffered in dead, wounded, and sick. In the tenth and eleventh Italian offensives we lost between 80,000 and 100,000 men. Now, however, our losses were similarly about 100,000 men. (Commotion.) I am obliged to record this regrettable circumstance. This figure includes the fallen, the slightly and badly wounded, and those who were brought back as knocked up. (Commotion, and cries of "Purely Hungarians?") I mention this figure in order to set forth the position with entire candour—(hear, hear)—and also because our enemies will certainly portray these losses in an exaggerated manner, and perhaps also public opinion here might do the same. I will only further remark—because such rumours are also circulating—that this time, too, Hungarian troops were again called upon in excessively large numbers, and that the losses only fall upon them—that thirty-three Hungarian and thirty-seven Austrian regiments participated in the entire offensive and retreat; that is, 47 per cent. Hungarians and 53 per cent. Austrians. In the entire advance and retreat the losses of the Italians amounted to 150,000 men, thus far surpassing our losses in dead, wounded, and sick. The report was also circulated that our losses were caused by lack of ammunition.

A Deputy—Lack of food?

Dr. Wekerle—Our army was never so well provided with ammunition as in the middle of June. It is correct that of the three bridges thrown across the Piave one unfortunately collapsed, and both the others were carried away, whereby insurmountable difficulties arose in taking up ammunition and provisions. (Commotion.) The retreat was followed according to regular plan, and only a few troops who remained behind to cover the retreat fell into Italian hands. I will, therefore, state that the entire retreat, as the Honved Minister also said, took place in such an orderly and unobserved manner that the Italians themselves after the retreat did not observe this, but still continued their attacks against our entrenchments, and in general against our former positions and our troops.

The Honved Minister here interjected: "The attack was also repulsed by our artillery."

Dr. Wekerle—If, despite these regrettable events, I draw deductions from the whole, it is undoubted that we inflicted important losses on the Italians, and prevented them from sending a considerable part of their troops to the Western front, which, in the interest of the common carrying on of the war, is, without doubt, an objective which it was also our duty to attain. This aim, too, we have attained.

ATTEMPT TO EXPLAIN PREMIER'S STATEMENT.

A Vienna telegram makes an interesting endeavour to correct the bad impression evidently produced by the statement of the Hungarian Premier in the Lower House on the losses suffered in the recent offensive against Italy. The official Vienna agency states that it learns from an authoritative source that the figure of a hundred thousand at which the Hungarian Premier appears to have placed the Austrian losses rests in the misinterpretation of a hasty telephone despatch. The Hungarian Government was informed by the Supreme Army Command that the losses were less than those incurred in the tenth and eleventh Isonzo battles, which amounted to from eighty to a hundred thousand. The telegram, continuing, says—"No exact data are available regarding the losses mentioned in the speech in question. The figure indicated by comparison with the tenth and eleventh Isonzo battles relates, not to the Piave front, and still less to the 70th Infantry Regiment alone, which was mentioned by the Premier, but to the entire front from Monte Stelvio to the Adriatic, and comprises the period from the 15th to the 20th of June, or six battle days."

AMERICAN TROOPS ARRIVE.

STATE OF RUSSIA.

THE LATE TSAR SAFE.

PETROGRAD WITHOUT FOOD.

A Reuter telegram from Bale, dated Friday, says that the papers state, under reserve, that the Court of Darmstadt has received news from Moscow through the Russian Embassy in Berlin, to the effect that the ex-Tsar is safe.

The Kieff newspaper, Nacha Rodina, quotes a member of the Soviet Government as stating that the rumour of the ex-Tsar's assassination is false, and that the ex-Tsar and his family are in good health, and in no danger. The Minister also said that there was no truth in the report that the ex-Tsar was to be summoned before a Revolutionary tribunal.

Reuter's Correspondent states that a Moscow telegram, via Berlin, states that a telegram from Ekaterinburg, of June 24th, signed by the President of the Executive Committee, describes the rumours regarding the murder of the ex-Tsar as lies, designed to incite the public.

Petrograd, says a Reuter message from Amsterdam of Saturday's date, has received no food supplies whatever during the last four days. According to a statement issued by the Food Commissariat of Moscow, received here via Berlin, of twenty-six waggon-loads of grain from Elfa, which the Czechs allowed to pass, only eleven reached Petrograd, the rest having been detached at intervening stations by railway officials.

Reuter's Correspondent at Peking, in a message dated Wednesday, says:—A Harbin telegram states that Austro-German ex-prisoners of war have occupied the town of Irkutsk, and the Czecho-Slovak troops have withdrawn towards Krasnoyarsk. The telegram adds:—It is generally believed that the Czecho-Slovaks, though desirous of fighting on the Western front, will be obliged to remain in Siberia.

GERMANY AND THE BLACK SEA FLEET.

Reuter's Correspondent at Amsterdam, says:—Describing the events leading to the confiscation of the Russian Black Sea Fleet by the Germans, a semi-official Berlin telegram draws attention to the prescription of the Brest-Litovsk Treaty, according to which the vessels of the Black Sea Fleet were to remain inactive, either in Russian or foreign ports. "Some vessels, however," the telegram says, "ignored the treaty and cruised the Black Sea and the Sea of Asov, gradually adopting a hostile attitude towards the Allied forces, which were repeatedly forced into armed intervention. Only after the occupation of the Crimean Peninsula and Sebastopol, at the end of April, were further violations of the Brest treaty prevented. The largest modern units of the Fleet, however, withdrew to Novorossisk, refusing to return."

After describing, from reports of Russian officers, the confusion and differences of opinion which are stated to have prevailed on board the vessels, "for instance," it says, "in the course of a few days, the sailors repeatedly changed their State allegiance." The telegram continues:—"In the course of these differences, the Dreadnought Svobodnaya, Rossia (Empress Ekaterina II.), was torpedoed and sunk by a destroyer at Kertsch. Other destroyers were also victims in this fighting, and were sunk off the eastern coast of the Black Sea, or ran ashore. The Dreadnought Volia (Emperor Alexander) and several modern destroyers returned to Sebastopol on June 19th, where the entire Russian Black Sea Fleet, still fit for war purposes, is now under German control."

LAWLESSNESS IN IRELAND.

THE TRALEE MILITARY AREA.

ALL MEETINGS PROHIBITED—PUBLIC-HOUSES CLOSED.

In addition to the proclamation already issued scheduling Tralee a special military area, a further Order has been issued, dated 25th June, in the course of which it is stated: Whereas, at about 2 p.m. on Friday, 14th June, 1918, in the public street known as The Mall, Tralee, shots were feloniously fired at two members of the Royal Irish Constabulary in the presence of large numbers of the inhabitants of the town of Tralee aforesaid. And, whereas, none of the persons so present took any steps to apprehend the offenders. And, whereas, it is necessary to enforce special measures for the maintenance of law and order, and for the protection of the law-abiding inhabitants: Now, I, Lieutenant-Colonel H. M. Hardcastle, Commandant of the Tralee Special Military Area, and Competent Military Authority for the County of Kerry, do hereby order and require that premises licensed for the sale of intoxicating liquors within the Tralee Special Military Area shall be closed subject to such exceptions as to hours and purposes, and to compliance with such directions as are below specified:

(1.) The hours during which intoxicating liquors may be sold or supplied in any licensed premises shall be from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

(2.) Nothing in this Order shall be deemed to prohibit in cases where the same is otherwise lawful, the consumption of intoxicating liquor by any person in any licensed premises where he is residing.

(3.) Save, as hereinbefore expressly provided, the prohibition under this Order of the sale or supply of intoxicating liquor, except during certain hours, is not subject to the exceptions provided for in the Licensing (Ir.) Acts, 1833-1901 with respect to travellers or to any other provisions in these Acts enabling intoxicating liquors to be supplied in special cases during closing hours.

And I, the said Competent Military Authority, do further Order that in the said area, being within an area, to wit, Ireland, in respect of which the Defence of the Realm (Amendment) Act, 1915, is for the time being suspended, the holding of or taking part in processions, meetings, or assemblies, including fairs, is prohibited in public places.

Another Order was issued from the Competent Military Authority on Saturday, writes our Tralee Correspondent, closing the licensed premises of Thomas Slattery, Rock street, and Cornelius Tuomey, The Mall, and making it an offence for any persons other than the residents and servants of the houses named, and those engaged in supplying them with their necessary domestic requirements, to enter or leave the premises.

The result of the new Orders so far is that the business of the town has been practically paralysed. The difficulty of obtaining permits to enter the special military area is naturally great, owing to the numerous applicants from various parts of the surrounding districts.

MIDNIGHT RAID IN TYRONE.

Information has just come to hand, writes our Omagh Correspondent, of a daring raid on a cottage in the Castlederg district at the beginning of last week. It appears that early in the morning of the 23rd ultimo, a man, who resides near Ardbarron, was awakened by a noise at the cottage window. He and his wife got up, and reached the front door at the same time as the disturbers turned their attention to it. The raiders tried to force the door, whilst the man and his wife used every effort to prevent such a contingency. It yielded a little, however, and the defenders found themselves looking down the barrel of a gun which had been thrust through the aperture. Leaving the door to take care of itself the man seized the weapon and pushed it up. The door was then pushed in against the wall, and the occupants of the house were dismayed to find themselves opposed by two men with blackened faces, one of whom was armed with a single-barrelled sporting piece, whilst the other carried something resembling a policeman's baton. The owner of the cottage wrestled with the man who had the gun, but the other man attacking him with the baton, he was overpowered, and, pleading for his life, he was ordered to clear out, his exit being covered all the while with the sporting piece. Information of the affair was conveyed to the Castlederg police, and they hurried to the scene, but the intruders had taken their departure before their arrival. About and in the house were discovered the gun, a policeman's baton, the heavily loaded butt of a whip, and a couple of flashlights. Some time later the police arrested two men, named John Porter and Michael Corry, both of Coolcreaghy, and brought them before Mr. A. McSorley, J.P., on the charge of breaking and entering the house with intent to commit a felony. They were remanded in custody for eight days.

CIVILIANS TRIED BY COURT-MARTIAL.

A District Courtmartial was held at the New Barracks, Limerick, on Saturday, when James McDonnell, County Councillor, of Court, Rathkeale, was charged under the Defence of the Realm Act with having firearms in his possession on the 25th May. Major Wakefield, Royal Welsh Fusiliers, was President of the Court.

Lieutenant Gower prosecuted, and Mr. P. J. O'Sullivan, solicitor, defended.

Evidence was given by District Inspector Williamson, Adare; Constable Cloghessy, Rathkeale, and Corporal Robinson, to the effect that the accused man's residence was searched, and a double-barrelled gun, a revolver, and ammunition were found.

Mr. W. R. Gubbins J.P., Chairman Limerick County Council; Canon O'Donnell, P.P., Rathkeale; and Mr. R. Cussen, solicitor and coroner for West Limerick, were examined as to character.

The President announced that the decision would be promulgated in due course.

A District Courtmartial, presided over by Major Whittaker, assembled at Victoria Barracks, Cork, on Saturday morning to try Jeremiah Breen, Kilworth, on a charge of having, on the 10th June, at Ballinrush, Co. Cork, interfered with Sergeant George Clune, R.I.C., by attempting to stop the vehicle in which he was travelling and by assaulting him.

Mr. W. C. Gover, R.G.A., prosecuted, and the accused, who pleaded not guilty, was defended by Mr. Maurice O'Connor, solicitor.

Sergeant Clune and Constable Walsh swore that as they were escorting a man named Walsh, who had been arrested under the Defence of the Realm Act, from Mitchelstown to Fermoy, the accused, who was one of a crowd of about a dozen, stood in front of the motor in which they were conveying Walsh, waved his hands, and shouted something, afterwards throwing a stone which struck the sergeant on the hand. They arrested the accused on the spot, and he resisted violently, threw himself on the ground, twisted his legs around the sergeant and knocked him on the road.

For the defence, Timothy Cahill, Mitchelstown, was examined, and swore that the accused did not throw stones. He admitted, in cross-examination, that there were cries of "Up the rebels" and "Up Dublin" as the car passed. He gave the names of many of those who were in the crowd.

The finding of the Court will be promulgated later.

A SUNDAY PROCESSION AT RHODE.

At a special Crimes Court in Tullamore on Saturday, before Messrs. C. R. Butler, R.M., and P. D. Byrne, R.M., four young men from Rhode, near Edenderry, King's Co., named Patrick Ennis, Bernard Scally, Wm. Connor, and Daniel Callan, were charged with unlawful assembly in the village of Rhode on Sunday, 9th June, and with drilling. Mr. Rogers, solicitor, defended.

Evidence was given by Sergeant O'Donnell, Rhode, who deposed to seeing the prisoners, with 80 others, in military formation on the street of the village on Sunday, 9th June. Ennis was at the head of the company, and Wm. Connor gave words of command, which were obeyed. They were dismissed opposite the church before going into Mass.

The evidence for the defence was that the procession was a religious one, organised in connection with La na mBan (Women's Day). The children and girls carried religious banners, recited the Rosary, and sang a hymn. Father Norris said that the procession was organised with his consent, and Miss Hughes, who organised it, said it was not confined to Sinn Feiners, but was open to all the people of the parish. It was purely a religious procession.

Mr. Byrne, in announcing the decision of the Court, said the Bench had not the slightest doubt as to the truthfulness of the sergeant's statement. The procession may have originated with a legitimate object, but a portion of it formed part of an unlawful assembly. Ennis and Connor were each sentenced to three calendar months imprisonment with hard labour, and Scally and Callan to one calendar month each with hard labour.

THE KILBEGGAN CASES.

On Saturday, in the Mullingar Courthouse, seven youths from the Kilbeggan, Clara, and Tullamore districts, were charged before Mr. Gerrard, R.M. (in the chair) and Mr. W. M. S. Moore, R.M., with taking part in an unlawful assembly on Sunday, 23rd June, at Kilbeggan. Mr. T. J. Dowdall, LL.B., Crown Solicitor, prosecuted, and Mr. J. Rogers, solicitor, Tullamore, defended.

Patrick Baker, Louis Downes, and John Martin were first charged, the offence being alleged to have taken place after an Aeridheacht in Kilbeggan district, when the military had carried out a search in the Sinn Fein Hall there. Sergeant Reddy stated there was a crowd of about 200, and the "Soldier's Song" was sung, and voices cried "Up the Rebels," "Up the Kaiser," "God strafe England," and "God strafe the King."

Lieutenant William Houston Chalmers, who was in charge of the military on the date in question, said that a crowd gathered in Kilbeggan after the arrival of the military. The "Soldier's Song" was sung, and the word "soldier" was sometimes changed to "rebel." The defendant Martin, was very prominent, and witness heard him say "God strafe the King," and use the word "rebel" in singing the "Soldier's Song." There was derisive cheering whilst the military were in the Sinn Fein Hall.

In cross-examination by Mr. Rogers, the witness said that there were no shots fired by the military and no blank cartridge. The sound of shots came from back-fire of the motor lorry.

Lance-Corporal Browne identified the defendant Downes.

For the defence, Edward O'C[illegible] deposed that he was at the [illegible] something like shots, but he would not say they were shots, but were like it. Describing the Sinn Fein Club in Kilbeggan after the visit of the military, witness said the place presented a rather wrecked appearance, when he saw it. He saw about 20 or 30 people in the street, and they were singing the "Soldier's Song." He did not hear Downes say "Up the Rebels" or "God strafe England."

In cross-examination by Mr. Dowdall, he said that he was identified with the Sinn Fein organisation, and had been in jail.

After some time in consultation, the Bench dismissed the charge against Baker on the ground that it was suggested he was a boy of deficient intellect. Martin and Downes were bound to the peace—themselves in £100 and two £50 sureties. They gave bail.

William Rigney, William Smith, Thomas Kennedy, and Patrick Berry were then charged, also with unlawful assembly on the same evening at 6.30 in Kilbeggan, and the police alleged that they took part in a procession which marched in fours; also that the accused Rigney had an amount of seditious literature on his person, including a "Sinn Fein Catechism," "Constitution of the Fianna," and seditious post-cards.

For the defence, Mr. M. H. White, Chairman of the Tullamore Board of Guardians, and Mr. P. Brett, T.C., Mullingar, gave it as their opinion that the crowd were not marching in military formation, as alleged, at the time.

The Bench sentenced each of the accused to one month without hard labour, and to find bail in £100 and two £50 sureties for future good behaviour, or two months' further imprisonment in default of bail. The accuseds' solicitor gave notice of appeal in all the cases.

SPECIAL EXTRA.

"THE FEDERAL SOLUTION."

If, says the Morning Post, the "federal solution" will do nothing for the Empire or for the efficiency of Parliament, it will equally do nothing for Ireland. The trouble in Ireland is the demand for Dominion Home Rule, which, as Lord Brassey in introducing the deputation admitted, would "impair the security and integrity of the United Kingdom." Federalism will not content those in Ireland who are now discontented, and according to all present exposition of the scheme, it leaves the Ulster difficulty untouched. Yet it is to be noted also that Mr. Adamson, on behalf of the Labour party, insists that no federal solution is to be made an excuse for delaying Irish Home Rule. He would presumably dispose of the Ulster difficulty by ignoring it. With what seems like a sudden conviction of sin, the Prime Minister points out that it is impossible "to carry anything during the war without something like general consent," and he has doubt as to the state of feeling in England. We applaud his prudent reserve, which appears better late than never, and we venture the prediction that feeling in England will be slow to approve a scheme which settles nothing while unsettling so much.

It is urged, says the London Daily Express, that federal devolution would give Ireland a measure of self-government sufficient to satisfy opinion in the United States and the Dominions, even if it did not satisfy the irreconcilables in Ireland itself. The Prime Minister doubts whether there is a sufficiently wide approval of devolution in England, the predominant partner, to make it possible for a bill to be passed during the war. The deputation referred to Ireland as part of the United Kingdom. That is exactly what the Sinn Feiners assert she is not. To them Ireland is an independent nation, ready to make an alliance with the enemy of Great Britain, who is also the enemy of the United States, France, and Italy. The British people will never accept this theory, and the free nations with whom Great Britain is allied will never back it.

ZEPPELIN WORKS IN RUINS.

The Special Correspondent of the Daily Chronicle at Milan, telegraphing last night, reports that an Austrian citizen, just returned to Basle from a visit to Friedrichshafen, says that, as the result of recent heavy bombing by French aerial squadrons, the famous Zeppelin factories and hangars on the shore of Lake Constance have been entirely destroyed and reduced to a heap of fantastic ruins.

SEARCHLIGHT BOMB.

It seems, says the Paris Correspondent of the Daily Mail, that the Hun airmen are using bombs which light up the place where they fall. They have a form of long tube of sheet iron, and at the end there is an automatic system of release regulated by clockwork. In falling the bomb works a clock, and at 200 or 300 yards from the ground a canvas parachute, which carries a magnesium cartridge, is detached, and for two or three minutes the immediate vicinity is lit up.

AIR RAID ON PARIS LAST NIGHT.

An air raid warning was given in Paris at 11.55 on Sunday night, and the "All Clear" at 12.25 this morning, says a Reuter's telegram from Paris.

A MILLION AMERICANS IN FRANCE.

Lord Reading, says a message from Atlantic City, was the principal speaker at the Maryland Bar Association's meeting on Saturday night. He declared that international law, conventions, and treaties would be valueless unless the Allied aims were accomplished, as they surely would be. Germany might well reel with amazement at the results of the American advent, despite the German Government's efforts at concealment. Just now, proceeded Lord Reading, a million American men must be in France, according to Mr. Baker.

AIR RAID ON MANNHEIM.

The Air Ministry announces:—On the evening of the 28th June the enemy aerodrome at Frescati was attacked. Owing to bad visibility the bursts were unobserved. On the 29th June the Badisch aniline and soda factory at Mannheim, in spite of adverse weather conditions, was very successfully attacked. Many heavy bombs were dropped, and six bursts were observed on the factory. Our formation was attacked over the objective by five hostile machines. Three of these were driven down, two of which were out of control. All our machines returned safely.

The Air Ministry further announces:—

On the night of June 29th-30th bombing squadrons attacked the railway works at Thionville, the siding at Metz Sablon, the enemy's aerodromes at Frescaty, and Boulay, and other military objectives. Mists prevented observation of the results. The barracks and station at Landau were also bombed. The formation over Landau was heavily attacked by hostile aeroplanes. Three of the enemy were destroyed. Two of our machines are missing.

A TRAVELLING MYSTERY.

How many thousands of stalwart young Irishmen found their way from the counties of Kerry and Wexford to Jones's road, Dublin, yesterday, it would be difficult to guess. The hurling grounds there were densely crowded, the embankments and the railway line above the field filled to the last foot of space. Roofs of buildings were utilised as grand stands, and telegraph and telephone poles overlooking the playing pitch were decorated with clinging masses of juvenile humanity, like flies on a long sugar-stick. The combined "voice" of this multitude, as it howled, shrieked, or cheered, according to the fortunes of the game, might have been heard at Holyhead if the wind blew that way. Without special excursion trains, it appeared a puzzle how all the thousands of sturdy young provincial men and their feminine friends and relatives managed to "get up to Dublin for the day" and back again.

A feature of the proceedings was the conferring of degrees honoris causa upon Miss Lucy Penelope Gwynn and Dr. Vincent Arthur Smith. The large congregation loudly applauded these recipients, the Latin addresses for whom were read by the Public Orator, translations of which here follow:—

VINCENT ARTHUR SMITH.

There now comes before you a man right worthy of our admiration to receive the distinction of our honorary degree of Doctor of Letters—a distinction which he well deserves, for he has achieved fame as an historian (and to the difficulty of writing history we have the witness of Sallust) by a series of works of profound learning. As a student of this College he won the highest honours in Classics and History. On the completion of his University course he passed brilliantly into the Indian Civil Service; and, on arriving in the East, he was entrusted, while still a very young man, with duties of the highest importance. Indeed, if I mistake not, he had only been some three years in that country when he was called upon to assist in the administration of the food supply during a grievous outbreak of famine throughout the district now known as the United Provinces. Of this humane and most difficult task he acquitted himself with conspicuous success. In later years his progress to high office was rapid and uninterrupted, and so greatly were his meritorious services esteemed by the authorities of his Province that he ultimately attained the position of Secretary to Government. Yet amid all these labours his interest in literature never flagged; for on his retirement he devoted himself to the study of early Indian history, investigated the records of dim antiquity, and treated in a work of great lucidity the affairs of India from a period dating back to some three hundred years before the time of Alexander the Great. He has also published a learned treatise on the life, wars, and empire of that other illustrious monarch Akbar; his History of Fine Art in India, and his writings on Indian Archæology and Coins, are marked no less by profundity of research than by grace and brilliancy of style; nor, I believe, is a spring of such rich learning likely soon to fail. Surely, then, it was but just for the Royal Asiatic Society to present to such a man some weeks ago its gold medal, the highest reward it can bestow for wide erudition and untiring industry; but I am well assured that he will value no less highly the distinction which his University confers upon him to-day with such hearty good-will. I call upon you, then, with confidence to greet Vincent Arthur Smith with your loudest applause.

M.A.
LUCY GWYNN.

It is now my good fortune to bring before you Miss Lucy Gwynn, a lady of mark, long honoured and esteemed amongst us, one whom we regard with the most sincere affection not only for her father's and her [illegible] sake, but also for her own. Right joyfully do we confer upon her the honour of our degree, [illegible] the fidelity with which she has so long discharged her duties, and of her [illegible] devotion and well nigh inestimable services to her Alma Mater. It is chiefly from our lady students that she deserves applause, for it is to their guidance here, to their early training in all that is good and true that she has devoted herself for fourteen years, holding nothing human foreign to her, affording a signal proof of the immense importance in so responsible a position of the happy blend of pleasant kindliness with firmness and unswerving rectitude, and justly winning not only the deep attachment of those committed to her charge, but singular admiration and respect from all who know her. Why dwell, in addressing you, on her dignity, her influence, and her graciousness; on the wisdom of her counsels in times of difficulty and doubt; and on the ability, zeal, and success with which she has performed so delicate a task? Let us rather summon to yet closer fellowship with us one whom to know is to be her friend, to be her friend is to admire. That we soon must lose her we lament, yet no less heartily rejoice that this opportunity is given us of testifying how close are the bonds with which this University, though she be parted from us, would yet bind her to our hearts. We speed you, then, good friend, with the prayer of Horace, and I dare pledge my word that, as you will never forget us, so we shall never, while we live, forget you. And I call on you, ladies and well-wishers all, to make her, this day, with oft-repeated rounds of loud and affectionate applause, more truly our own, if that may be, than ever she was before.

"Be happy wheresoe'er thou art,"

PUBLIC NOTICE

"Spanish Influenza" Epidemic

In view of the widespread prevalence of this disease, attention is called to the following statement by the chief medical officer of the Local Government Board:—

"The disease is most infectious, and it is necessary that all possible precautions should be taken . . . one case to-day may mean a hundred to-morrow and thousands within a week. The symptoms are readily recognisable, consisting of extreme lassitude, aching of the limbs and headache. There is generally, but not always, nasal catarrh."

Attention is also called to the following statement by the author of "Influenza: Its Cause and Treatment":—

"In Formamint Tablets we possess the best means of preventing the infective processes which, if neglected, may lead to serious complications. Consequently every influenza patient should suck four or five of these tablets a day until convalescent . . . There is no reason why individuals, families, and households should not adopt the preventive measures that the State cannot enforce on a large scale. No hardship is involved in sucking a Formamint tablet and taking a small dose of quinine when exposed to the danger of infection."

PREVENTION BY FORMAMINT

Note: The Formamint tablets referred to above are manufactured by Genatosan, Ltd. (British Purchasers of The Sanatogen Co.), 12, Chenies Street, London, W.C. 1, and are obtainable of all chemists at 2/2 per bottle. LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

IRISH BUTTER SUPPLIES.

Letter from Mr. R. A. Anderson.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—At a meeting of the representatives of Irish Co-operative Creameries, held under the auspices of the I.A.O.S. on June 28th, the following resolution was unanimously passed, and I was directed to forward the same to you with a view to publication:—

That, in view of the grave danger of a shortage of butter for home consumption in Ireland during the coming winter, we call upon the Food Control Committee for Ireland to make arrangements for the cold storing of butter in public stores and at the creameries. For this purpose a reasonable price for butter sold in the winter months should be guaranteed, and also assurance should be given that creameries will be allowed to sell this butter without Governmental interference. Unless this is done we fear that conditions will be found worse than last year, and the Irish public may be left entirely without butter.

It is believed that the position in Ireland with regard to butter supplies during the coming winter will be exceedingly serious unless some steps are taken at once, and in view of the fact that the output of margarine is likely to be considerably restricted, there is every probability that the population will not be able to obtain a sufficient fat ration for their proper nutriment under the present conditions of food supplies. It will be remembered that a position of this kind arose last winter, but it is believed that the coming winter will be found worse in this respect, and that the consequences may be very serious. I trust, therefore, that urgent attention will be paid to this important matter.

At the same meeting the opinion was expressed that the present conditions under which condensed milk and milk powder are being made enabled the makers of these commodities to exercise undue competition for whole and separated milk, and that if this were allowed to continue it would have a very serious effect on the supplies of whole milk, butter, and cheese available for the Irish population, and would also be detrimental to the cattle and pig-raising industries which are largely bound up with the existing dairying industry. In order to avert this it is felt to be urgently necessary that strict control should be exercised over the manufacture of condensed milk and milk powder. The opinion was also expressed that steps should at once be taken to ensure that during the coming season the grading and storage of butter to be exported to England should be carried out in Ireland, as the present system is undoubtedly leading to great wastage and confusion, to the detriment of the dairying industry.—Yours, etc.,

R. A. Anderson, Secretary.

MR. ASQUITH'S SUGGESTION.

Letter from Professor Alison Phillips.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—In your abstract of my letter to The Times under the above heading, published in your to-day's issue, there are one or two obscurities, due, doubtless, to the exigencies of telegraphic compression, which I should be obliged if you would allow me to clear up. It is in the first place not evident that the words "a scheme acceptable to all parties in Ireland" are quoted from Mr. Asquith, which must be realised if the point of my argument is to be understood.

Of more importance is an omission from the last paragraph, which deals with the attitude of Great Britain towards the "rights of small nationalities." As this is a question which, owing to the loose language used by politicians, is much misunderstood in this country, perhaps you will allow me to supply the omission. I stated in my letter to The Times that the traditional policy of the British Government has been to protect the "recognised rights" of small nations of the Continent against the aggressive ambitions of any of the Great Powers, and that honour and interest alike would keep us true to this policy. I added that we are bound in honour to keep our promises to those small nationalities which have assisted us in this war to the best of their power, though their aspirations are not "rights" in the sense of being already sanctioned by the public law of Europe. I denied that we are bound by the proclamation by certain of our leading politicians of vague general principles the attempt to assert which would make a stable peace impossible.

In connection with this I may, perhaps, be allowed to make a brief comment on a curiously simple-minded document which has been widely circulated in Dublin. In this "statement to be submitted to the leaders of public opinion," which I, among others, have been invited to sign, it is suggested that the question of Ireland's claim to independent nationhood should be submitted to "a competent international tribunal," composed of delegates representing the United States and such European nations as still remain neutral.

From the point of view of uncompromising Unionism there might be something to be said for this proposal. A tribunal of international jurists would decide any question laid before them, not on abstract principles of "right," but in accordance with the principles of public law as defined in treaties or established by precedent or custom. Since in the issue proposed to be submitted there is no question of treaty-right involved, the tribunal would have to be guided by precedent, and its members would naturally look for precedents in the former action of their own States in similar circumstances. What was the nature of this action? The neutral States of Europe are Sweden, Norway, Holland, Switzerland, Denmark, and Spain. In 1814 Sweden subdued by force of arms the resistance of Norway, which had been assigned to her by the Powers, and, after an uneasy existence for ninety years, the union thus achieved was finally dissolved by mutual consent. In 1831 the Dutch went to war to prevent the dissolution of the Union of the Netherlands, and they only finally yielded to the pressure of the Great Powers in 1839. As for Switzerland, in 1847 the Protestant cantons defeated by force of arms an attempt of the Catholic cantons (the Sonderbund) to secede from the Confederation. Denmark, in 1848 and again in 1864, went to war to prevent the secession of the duchies of Schleswig and Holstein, and is now resisting the separatist efforts of Iceland. Spain has again and again suppressed the separatist tendencies of Catalonia. As for the United States, in 1861 they began the greatest civil war of all history in resistance to the claim of the Southern States to the right of "self-determination."

Such are the precedents. It may be doubted whether, in the highly improbable event of an international tribunal thus constituted being got together, its decision would be very palatable to those who signed the "statement."—Yours, etc.,

W. Alison Phillips.

PETROL WASTE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—How long are the feelings of the loyal and law-abiding people in this country to be outraged by the constant violation of the law by respectable persons occupying responsible positions? For one who happens to be caught how many others do not daily succeed in evading policemen and are not apprehended? That people who know better deliberately set themselves to evade the law is a fact which should be at once recognised and dealt with by the authorities, more particularly as it is now deplorably evident that our police magistrates are so lacking in appreciation of the position and of their own responsibilities as upholders of the law that the ridiculous fines which they inflict are simply an encouragement to a continuation of the offences.

We are assured that petrol is required for the winning of the war—hence the official restrictions. Its deliberate waste here is—like the very many other actions of every-day occurrence in this country—a direct assistance to Germany. How soon is all this to be put a stop to?

Then, again, we have the spectacle of race trains (notwithstanding the scarcity of coal) crowded to overflowing by "hefty" young men. Why should such amusement be provided for those who will not serve their country? What an object lesson it is for our English and Scotch soldiers (many of them old men—fathers of families, with sons serving too) who are now amongst us: men of fifty called up because young men here stay at home.

I can assure you, sir, that, although the letters to the papers on these subjects have been few, the feelings of those who realise that a war is actually going on, and particularly of those whose nearest and dearest are hourly risking their lives for pleasure-seekers and law-breakers here, are becoming stirred to an extent which is not at all realised.—Yours, etc.,

"Quondam Motorist."

City and Co. Dublin House and Property-Owners' Association.—A meeting of the Executive Committee of above Association will be held this evening at 32 Nassau street for co-option of additional members on Executive Committee; to arrange for a deputation to the Local Government Board re inquiry for assessment in the proposed scheme for amalgamation of North and South Unions; and other important business.

Royal Society of Antiquaries.—A quarterly meeting of the Royal Society of Antiquaries will be held on to-morrow (Tuesday) at 8 p.m. in 63 Merrion square, Dublin, to elect fellows and members, and to read the following papers:—"Note on an Inscribed Shrine-Arch," by E. C. R. Armstrong, V.P.; "The Churches of Coole, Co. Cork," by Rev. Professor Power, member. Notes on places to be visited will be given with lantern views on the evenings of the 2nd and 3rd, on which days the antiquities of the city will be seen, and the northern part of County Dublin on the 4th.

Death of Nurse Sheridan.—The death occurred on Saturday last, at the Nurses' Home, Royal City of Dublin Hospital, of Nurse K. Sheridan, at the age of 25. She was at her post up to Thursday, when she was stricken with influenza, and pneumonia developed. Nurse Sheridan was a sister of Mr. John Sheridan, J.P., Irish manager of Bovril, Ltd. She was at school in Belgium when the war broke out, and on returning home joined the City of Dublin Hospital. Her brother is a prisoner of war in Germany.

Irish Cattle Traders' Association.—At a meeting of the Irish Cattle Traders and Stockowners' Association, held at the City Arms Hotel, Prussia street, Dublin, Mr. John Leonard, J.P., presided. Great dissatisfaction was expressed by many members with the system of grading sheep and lambs at Holyhead and Birkenhead. The Committee were of opinion that the scheme, as they had anticipated, was now shown to be unworkable, a result due to the fact that they had not been consulted in formulating it. The Committee considered that, in the event of an owner of sheep and lambs being dissatisfied with the valuation of his stock, he should be allowed to elect, after valuation, to have them killed and paid for on the dead weight, and they were of opinion that this is the only effective way of making the present scheme in any degree acceptable to the trade. Complaints were made that no definite information had been given to the Committee or members as to the appointment of graders, for which positions the Committee, at the special request of the Department of Agriculture, had submitted names of reliable men, such being absolutely essential to the honest administration of the scheme. The question of the enormous loss of food value occasioned by the ten hours' detention system was again considered. It was noted with satisfaction that the Department had announced that the grading of sheep and lambs would in future take place immediately after landing.

FIRE AT RINGSEND.

Considerable damage was caused by a fire which occurred early yesterday morning at the premises of Messrs. James Beckett, South Dock Works, Ringsend road. Two sections of the Pembroke Fire Brigade were promptly on the scene, in charge of Captain Hutson, with two motor engines, and after about half an hour's hard work had the flames well in hand. The premises are equipped with the usual requirements of the building trade, including sawing and planing machinery, and there was a good deal of completed work on hand. The latter section of the building was saved by the efforts of the firemen, and the fire was confined to the engine and drying sheds. The work can be carried on as usual, and it is understood that the damage is fully covered by insurance.

RETURN VISIT TO DUBLIN

MR. FRANKLIN'S SECOND VISIT TO IRELAND.

Mr. Franklin, the well-known London eyesight specialist is about to re-visit us, and all those suffering from defective eyesight can have advice free.

WHO IS MR. FRANKLIN?

Mr. Franklin is a scientific expert in eye-testing established at London, 34 Strand (3 doors from Charing Cross Station), where thousands (over 100,000 as a matter of fact), from the highest to the lowest, are blessing him for his skill and timely help that has saved them from comparative blindness.

A WORLD'S RECORD.

Mr. Franklin holds the World's Record for having fitted 10,000 people in Gamage's in 1911 in a period of six weeks. This itself is regarded as an astounding record, and the work done by this wonderful man gave widespread satisfaction, and established Mr. Franklin as the leading Optometrist of to-day. What he has done for these 10,000 people (representing all ages) he can do for you. His record while in Dublin a few years ago is his best testimonial. He returns to Ireland by special request. All his clients of 1915 are respectfully invited to come and have their lenses changed free of all charge, as per Mr. Franklin's 10-year guarantee.

NOW IS YOUR CHANCE.

Mr. Franklin will be in Dublin for ten days only, commencing to-morrow (Tuesday), July 2nd, at the Crown Hotel, Sackville street, during which time he will examine the eyes of all sufferers who come to him free of charge, and will advise and prescribe if necessary. If it is merely a temporary weakness, he will tell you so, because he does not want you to wear glasses unless they are actually needed.

DISEASES OF THE EYES.

In the event of his discovering any organic disease of the eyes Mr. Franklin will not prescribe himself, but will recommend you to consult the nearest oculist at once. Thus he differs from quacks and imitators who claim qualifications they do not possess. It cannot be impressed too plainly upon the reader that all Mr. Franklin's services are perfectly free.

OPTICAL EXPERTS.

Should Mr. Franklin consider that in order to save the sight or relieve the optic nerves, which frequently cause such distressing headaches (it has been stated that 90 per cent. of headaches arise through eye strain), Glasses are absolutely necessary, then he will recommend the nature and strength of the glasses that the patient ought to use, AND SEE THAT HE GETS THEM. This is more important, as the use of improper and unsuitable lenses often causes mischief. A staff of scientific optical workmen are in touch with Mr. Franklin, and, with the aid of all the latest mechanical appliances and scientific instruments, he is able to obtain for his patients the best possible lenses at the lowest possible prices.

SCALE OF CHARGES.

Owing to the absence of the "Middleman" these glasses, although of the finest quality and workmanship, can be supplied at a really nominal price, three shillings and sixpence being the cost of an average pair of lenses, which are of the finest quality and scientifically ground. Frames from 2/6 upwards. In case of special-ground lenses being required slight additional charges will be made.

REMEMBER.

As Mr. Franklin will not be able to spare more than ten days for Dublin, it would be well to cut this out to remind you that the dates when you can see him will be from TUESDAY, JULY 2nd, to SATURDAY, JULY 13th, during which period he will be at the and do not neglect to call upon him. Never neglect your eyes. Remember that the trifle of to-day becomes the terror of to-morrow. Hours, 10-1—2-7.30 p.m.

The portrait is of Miss B. Davey, of Tapster [illegible], Luppitt, nr. Honiton, Devon.

"For six months I was suffering from Eczema. My arms and face were nothing but a mass of [illegible]. I went to three doctors, but they did me no good. I saw your advertisement in the paper, [illegible] I would give Clarke's Blood Mixture a trial. I took seven bottles of it, and it has quite cured me. WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW.

Industrial trading continues to be of enforced narrowness by depletion of stocks. In most lines of commerce autumn quotations are already causing alarm, in view of sharp advances. There is less stringency in food supplies. Government terms for butter and cured hog meats have been eased. Cattle, sheep and lambs, on our metropolitan market this week showed a further all-round sharp reduction in price, and butcher's meat ought now to be obtainable on reasonable terms.

LONDON MONEY MARKET.

Bank Rate [illegible]

Loans were in brisk demand for a Saturday, today being the last working day of the month, while the market is closed on Monday for the special Bank Holiday. Over two millions were disbursed in various dividends. The rate for call money ranged from 3 to 3½ p.c., and just at the finish the market was obliged to borrow a further small sum at the central institution. Weekly advances were slightly easier at 3 to 3½ p.c., on expectations of a slackening of conditions after the turn of the month. The Discount Market remained quiet and cautious, with two to six months' bank drafts again posted at 3½ p.c. There was no alteration in rates for short-dated Treasury bills in the open market, and trade paper was about the same.

ATHLETICS.

Masonic Orphan Boys' School Sports.—The pupils of the Masonic Orphan Boys' School were fortunate in having such a fine afternoon for their annual sports at Richview, Clonskeagh, on Saturday. Seldom, indeed, have the proceedings associated with "sports day" been carried out under such pleasant conditions, and when the large number of friends and supporters of the school who accepted the invitations of the Governors had assembled, the ground presented a very pretty spectacle. The thirty events which made up the programme afforded an enjoyable afternoon's sport, and the enjoyment of the company was considerably enhanced by a selection played by the band of the Royal Hibernian Military School, and by the bugles of the Dublin Schools Cadet Corps. The form displayed by the boys was, all round, distinctly good, and in winning the Gerty Challenge Cup and Medal for the best all-round performance, A. Fleury was seen to advantage in the high jump, long jump, 100 yards handicap, and 220 yards handicap. Our portrait is of Miss B. Davey, of Tapster Water, Luppitt, nr. Honiton, Devon.

"For six months I was suffering from Eczema, and my arms and face were nothing but a mass of sores. I went to three doctors, but they did me no good. Then I saw your advertisement in the paper, so I thought I would give Clarke's Blood Mixture a trial. I took seven bottles of it, and it has quite cured me. I should have written before, but I thought I would wait a little while, and see if it was a permanent cure. I am glad to say it is." In a further letter received, Miss Davey's mother writes: "My daughter is in excellent health, and has never had Eczema since she was cured by Clarke's Blood Mixture."

Clarke's Blood Mixture, by reason of its remarkable blood purifying properties, can be relied upon to give speedy relief and lasting benefit in all cases of Eczema, Scrofula, Scurvy, Bad Legs, Abscesses, Boils, Pimples, Sores and Eruptions, Glandular Swellings, Piles, Rheumatism, Gout, etc. Pleasant to take, and free from anything injurious. WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW.

Industrial trading continues to be of enforced narrowness by depletion of stocks. In most lines of commerce autumn quotations are already causing alarm, in view of sharp advances. There is less stringency in food supplies. Government terms for butter and cured hog meats have been eased. Cattle, sheep and lambs, on our metropolitan market this week showed a further all-round sharp reduction in price, and butcher's meat ought now to be obtainable on reasonable terms.

FINANCIAL NEWS

LONDON MONEY MARKET.

Bank Rate (Discount) [illegible]

Loans were in brisk demand for a Saturday, to-day being the last working day of the month, while the market is closed on Monday for the special Bank Holiday. Over two millions were disbursed in various dividends. The rate for call money ranged from 3 to 3¼ p.c., and just at the finish the market was obliged to borrow a farther small sum at the central institution. Weekly advances were slightly easier at 3 to 3¼ p.c., on expectations of a slackening of conditions after the turn of the month. The Discount Market remained quiet and cautious, with two to six months' bank drafts again posted at 3½ p.c. There was no alteration in rates for short-dated Treasury bills in the open market, and trade paper was about the same.

ATHLETICS.

Masonic Orphan Boys' School Sports.—The pupils of the Masonic Orphan Boys' School were fortunate in having such a fine afternoon for their annual sports at Richview, Clonskeagh, on Saturday. Seldom, indeed, have the proceedings associated with "sports day" been carried out under such pleasant conditions, and when the large number of friends and supporters of the school who accepted the invitations of the Governors had assembled, the ground presented a very pretty spectacle. The thirty events which made up the programme afforded an enjoyable afternoon's sport, and the enjoyment of the company was considerably enhanced by a selection played by the band of the Royal Hibernian Military School, and by the bugles of the Dublin Schools Cadet Corps. The form displayed by the boys was, all round, distinctly good, and in winning the Gerty Challenge Cup and Medal for the best all-round performance, A. ON SEEING THINGS THROUGH

The will to see things through is worth a great deal. It is generally easier to begin a task than to carry it through to the desired end. Some people fail to complete their undertakings owing to a temporary slackening of physical energy. In such cases it is necessary to give immediate attention to the General Health. As a first step, care should be bestowed upon the digestion—the efficient working of which is of such paramount importance. If the stomach has lost tone, if the liver is sluggish, if the bowels are constipated or irregular, Beecham's Pills should be taken without delay. Success has attended treatment by this medicine, for so many years, and so remarkable have been the results, that Beecham's Pills can be recommended with the utmost confidence to all sufferers from digestive troubles. For energy and endurance—for the will to "win through"—Good Health is a supreme necessity. Good Health again depends so much upon Good Digestion that the wisdom of keeping the latter in order should be apparent to everybody. It is now generally recognised that this can be successfully accomplished by the judicious use of
